Walter Capps Dies at Age 63

■ Clinton, Colleagues Mourn Passing of 22nd Congressional District Peacemaker

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Rep. Walter Capps, a freshman Democrat who narrowly won a bitter election last year in a Central California district held by Republicans since World War II, died Tuesday after collapsing at a Washington-area airport.

Capps, 63, suffered an apparent heart attack at Dulles International Airport while returning from his district to vote on a defense authorization bill and other issues, colleagues said. His death was confirmed by press secretary Lisa Finkle in Washington.

Capps "brought constant values, a rare perspective and a sense of moral grounding that public life too often lacks, and will sorely miss," President Clinton said in a statement. Clinton campaigned for Capps in Santa Barbara last year.

For 30 years, Capps was a religious studies professor at the University of California, Santa Barbara. After his election to Congress to represent San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara counties, the soft-spoken Capps focused on education and human rights as well as reducing partisan conflicts.

"He talked extensively about a more compassionate Congress where we didn't have the partisan bickering, where people tried to sit down and work out issues," said

Congressman Capps spoke Saturday, Oct. 25, in Las Positas Park at a ceremony presenting the Bronze Star Award to Vietnam veteran and local photographer Rick Carter.

Marty Stone, a longtime friend and western political director for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

"I know Congress could have used a peacemaker like him for longer than he served," said Stone, who lost to Capps in the 1996 primary, but remained friends with him.

Sen. Bob Kerrey (D-Neb.) urged Capps to run for Congress again in 1996 after he lost to former Republican Rep. Andrea Seastrand by 1,600 votes in 1994. Kerrey, a Vietnam veteran, had been a featured lecturer in Capps' class on the Vietnam War.

"He showed people that a man can be decent and principled in the House. He will be sorely missed," Kerrey said Tuesday. "He was just

Tuesday afternoon marked the passing of a former UCSB professor and United States congressman.

Congressman Walter Capps collapsed and died Tuesday of an apparent heart attack at Dulles International Airport after his arrival in Washington, D.C., according to press secretary Lisa Finkle.

Many friends, work associates and students responded with praise and fond memories of the former professor and expressed support for his family. District representative for Walter Capps Ben Romo spoke on behalf of Capps' Santa Barbara office regarding his death.

"All I can do is confirm that Congressman Walter Capps passed away this afternoon," he said. "Our condolences are with his family."

According to UCSB Chancellor Henry T. Yang, Walter Capps will be remembered and admired for his overall excellence.

I.V. Grammar School To Be Reconstructed by Fall 1999

BY ALISON FINLEY

A local elementary school will be demolished and rebuilt in order to improve its on-site facilities and enlarge its campus.

Isla Vista Elementary School will be reconstructed between the summer of 1998 and September 1999. The new classrooms, which will replace existing portables, will be equipped with properly functioning heating and ventilation systems, as well as accommodations for upgraded technology like computers, according to Goleta Union School District Superintendent Richard Shelton.

Though the orientation of the buildings will be different, the school will be rebuilt on its current site. The modified facilities will be adequate to meet the needs of today's students, Shelton said.

"You'll have a brand-new facility with state-of-the-art technology," he said. "It will be a much more pleasant site and environment for students."

The rebuilt campus will be able to accommodate all students in grades K-6, according to Shelton. Currently, with 620-630 students enrolled at I.V. Elementary School, 90 kindergartners have to be bussed each day to Brandon School due to lack of space, he said.

I.V. Elementary School Principal Steve Flores expressed the importance of a school that is capable of supporting all students at one site.

"It will really become a community school," he said. "We are all I.V. community members and we all belong together."

The construction process will force the school to shut down for a little over a year, according to Shelton. During this time, students will be bussed to El Camino School, which will be renovated and reopened to host the temporary transfer students, he added.

Parent Ann Marie Kopeikin is pleased about the reconstruction of her children's school and is willing to work with the inconvenience of student

Use of Police Canines Upheld by Court

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Early June 10, 1990, Charles Dennis stole a carton of tennis shoes from a pickup truck in Fullerton, hopped into a car and led police on a chase into an east Los Angeles neighborhood. He ditched the car and hid in a backyard, beneath a discarded Venetian blind.

That's where Loebas found him. Authorities claim Dennis pushed the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Dept. dog away, prompting Loebas to bite in self-defense. But Dennis' attorney, Timothy J. Midgley, claims a handler repeatedly instructed Loebas to bite Dennis' face.

Police-dog critics claim Dennis' case is one example of widespread police dog misuse. Proponents maintain the dog and its handler were doing exactly what they were trained to do with a violent suspect.

Everyone has these visions of guard dogs with teeth.

— Deputy Keyon Evers
Sheriff's Dept. canine unit

Now cops have the law on their side. The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled on Oct. 3 that the use of police dogs cannot be considered a method of deadly force.

"Everyone has these visions of guard dogs with teeth," said Deputy Keyon Evers, a six-year veteran of the sheriff's canine unit. Loebas was trained by David Reaver, a police canine unit pioneer in the West at his kennel, Adlerhorst.

Five years ago, Dennis, who is black, sued Los Angeles County, the Sheriff's Dept. and the City of La Palma for more than $5 million, alleging excessive force, racial discrimination and other civil rights violations.

A Los Angeles Superior Court jury cleared the defendants of liability, saying Dennis was warned several times about the presence of a dog.

Los Angeles attorney Eugene Ramirez, who represents 20 police departments in police dog and SWAT team liability cases, said "Once you put aside the goriness of the picture and look at the facts objectively, they realized this guy was a threat."

Throughout the trial, deputies claimed they only followed guidelines learned during training at Adlerhorst. Reaver insists he has nothing to hide and welcomes critics to observe what goes on at his kennel.

"We don't base any amount of success on how many people get bitten. On the contrary, I like it when people don't get hurt. But the dogs do their job," Reaver said.

Because his dogs are so widely used, Reaver should be responsible for the actions of the animals, said attorney Donald W. Cook, a longtime, outspoken critic of what he considers police dog misuse.

Native American Tribe Regains Lake Tahoe Lands

ZEPHYR COVE, Nev. (AP) — The Washoe Indian tribe is poised to regain more than 400 acres of ancestral land at Lake Tahoe.

President Clinton signed an order in July that gives the tribe a permit to manage the land for 30 years. Agricultural Secretary Dan Glickman will finalize the deal during a signing ceremony on Wednesday.

For the Washoe Tribe, the event marks a return to their homeland after more than a century.

"It always has been and it always will be our home," Tribal Chair Brian Wallace said. "We're not allowed to forget. It's part of our ancient instructions."

Under the agreement, the tribe will regain 350 acres of meadow at Meeks Bay on Tahoe's west shore.

Wallace said the tribe plans to use the land to grow native plants and to educate youth and the public about its culture.

The tribe also intends to bid on operating the Meeks Bay campground and marina.

About 90 acres near Taylor Creek on the south shore also will be managed by the tribe. One area would be used to build a cultural center. The parcel also provides the tribe direct access to the lake's shore.

Theresa Jackson, a tribal member, said the tribe's return to Lake Tahoe comes more than 100 years after it was pushed out by white settlers.

"It's a spiritual lake for us," she said. "We honor it and pray for it and respect it."

Gov. Bob Miller also will attend the ceremony and sign his name to the deal pledging Nevada's support for the preservation of Lake Tahoe.

Area regulators and environmentalists have said about $1 billion is needed for environmental projects to stem the decline of Lake Tahoe's famous clear water and nurture the surrounding forests back to health.

During a two-day summit on Lake Tahoe in July, Clinton said his administration would provide $50 million over two years and directed federal agencies to help coordinate environmental efforts.

The agreement to be signed by Glickman on Wednesday finalizes those objectives.

Miller said the signing "strengthens the resolve of local, state and federal agencies to reach the goal of assuring the Tahoe area's aesthetic and ecological quality."

Youngster Alleging Racism, Abuse Sues School District

SAN PABLO, Calif. (AP) — The family of a 13-year-old San Pablo boy is suing the West Contra Costa School District, claiming a teacher hit the boy and used racial slurs with him.

The suit by the family of Julius Chew, who is black, alleges Pinole Middle School teacher Dennis Smithers intentionally mispronounced Julius' name in a wood shop class in November 1996 and called the boy "Mickey Mouse."

When Julius corrected him, Smithers began writing detention referrals and Julius told the teacher, "Make sure you write down the names you called me." Smithers allegedly replied, "Shut up nigger!" according to the suit.

After Julius complained, Smithers grabbed him and threw him into a door, striking him in the face as he got up, the suit says.

The attack came the day after Smithers ordered Julius to sweep his office then yelled at him for entering, the suit charges.

Court papers said a school nurse who examined Julius did not believe he was attacked and told him to return to class. Miles Washington, an attorney for the Chew family, said Smithers was not disciplined.

"Assaultive behavior, that's all I can describe it as," the attorney said. "We're seeking punitive damages and I want that to be known."

• CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Polish archaeologists have unearthed a 4,200-year-old pharaonic tomb near Cairo that has strikingly colored paintings on plaster of scenes of court life.

The tomb, belonging to Meret Nebf, a court minister in the 23rd century B.C., was discovered recently near Saqqara, 18 miles south of Cairo, by researchers from Warsaw University. "What sets this find aside from the others is the beautiful coloring and vivid detail of the paintings," said Zahi Hawass, director of antiquities in Giza and Saqqara.

Among the most impressive discoveries were two yellow and white paintings of geese that were almost identical to another painting found in a tomb in Maidum, near Saqqara.

Other paintings in the tomb depict the minister and his wife as well as a scene from a party where a harpist is playing.

Outside the tomb, the archaeologists found a mummy in a clay coffin, skeletons and Greco-Roman artifacts.

• VERMILION CLIFFS, Ariz. (AP) — The scene was so remarkable that even a seasoned condor tracker like Mark Vekasy was nearly moved to tears. Eleven California condors, about one-tenth of the entire population in existence, were riding thermals in the blue skies high above northern Arizona's dramatic red sandstone canyons on wings stretching nearly 10 feet across.

Nearly a year into a program to reintroduce North America's largest and rarest bird to the endless carved cliffs and valleys straddling the Arizona-Utah border where its ancestors cruised for carcasses of mastodons and saber-toothed tigers, wildlife experts say it's so far, so good.

Researcher Gives Talk on WWII Gays

By JILL ST. JOHN

The Education Program for Cultural Awareness hosted a lecture in conjunction with the Queer Student Union on "Homosexuality and the Holocaust" Tuesday in the MultiCultural Center Theater.

The symposium featured guest lecturer Gerard Koskovich, who has done extensive research on the conditions of homosexual life in Nazi Germany. According to Koskovich, legal and political forces began implementing tactics to repress homosexuals during the early 20th century.

"Legal systems in Germany began to create laws and regulations which in turn made being a homosexual a criminal offense," he said.

In addition to repressive legal systems, science looked toward genetics as the answer to what many Germans saw as a clinical disorder, according to Koskovich.

"German medical establishment began to classify gays as 'genetic degenerates' and saw this as justified grounds to implement counter-interventions in the form of therapy interventions," he said.

In reaction to the many oppressive forces, gays began to form homosexual rights' groups, Koskovich said.

"With the founding of homosexual rights' groups, the aim was to educate the public and focus on cultural reform ... which was to emerge into a wave of social reform," he said.

Despite social reform, stronger conservative regulations on homosexuals were instituted with the emergence of the Nazis, according to Koskovich.

"Homosexuals were described as being a deviant psychological subculture who crafted political conspiracies and aimed to disrupt [the] hierarchy," he said.

In 1936 the Nazis began combatting gays by intern- ing them in concentration camps, Koskovich said.

"Homosexual males were the first class of people to be singled out and placed in concentration camps," he said.

To distinguish homosexuals within the camps, the pink triangle became the standard prison marking for gay men, Koskovich said.

In the camps gay men had the lowest survival rate in relation to any other group sent to concentration camps, according to Koskovich.

"The majority of homosexual males in concentration camps were singled out for torture and assigned to the most dangerous work sites. ... Three-quarters of homosexual males died within their first year at concentration camps," he said.

Among those in attendance was Lance McDonald, a sophomore dramatic arts major.

"Homosexuals are often overlooked in relation to the Holocaust. Lectures such as these promote awareness and knowledge so that history doesn't repeat itself," he said.

Carina Zona, a member of the QSU and a Santa Barbara City College student, noted how lectures of this nature cover subjects that are overlooked in the classroom.

"This is an opportunity for us as a community to hear about issues that we would never ordinarily hear about in high school and also college," she said.

- Aries (March 21-April 19) - Today is a 6 - You can still feel the pressure building. That's OK; you can handle it. You'll have a real burst of energy this evening. There's nothing more relaxing, to you, than to get totally exhausted. So run a few laps around the track. See if you can break your old record.
- Taurus (April 20-May 20) - Today is a 7 - You must go through a labyrinth before you can achieve your goals. You may be feeling frustrated because you're not sure of your success. Don't worry about it. Nobody even knows you're having a problem. So don't tell them.
- Gemini (May 21-June 21) - Today is a 6 - Keep the various areas of your life separate for a while. Although your loved ones want to give you encouragement, telling them everything may be counterproductive. Your efficiency level will improve noticeably if you learn this simple lesson. Today, practice.
- Cancer (June 22-July 22) - Today is a 7 - Use skills you've learned at home, plus the advice of a roommate, to get along with a difficult person. You have a good reason. Don't forget what it was. You are determined to get your way. But, for heaven's sake, relax! Be nice. The other guy won't know what hit him.
- Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) - Today is a 7 - You feel you should be the leader. Today, and in the weeks to come, that will not be an easy position to maintain. You can lay some groundwork, though. If you establish yourself as a strong but kindly authority figure, it will be easier to maintain that position later.
- Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) - Today is a 7 - You still want to save money, of course. You'd do it even if it weren't necessary. You'd like to have the nicest things, especially if you can have them for less. So, get creative. You'll be even better than usual at crafts projects today.
- Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) - Today is a 7 - It looks like someone needs your advice. This person may be reluctant to ask, however. Make a few phone calls. The one who's in trouble will let you know. You are a natural counselor. Your attention, for just a little while, could make all the difference in the world.
- Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) - Today is a 6 - Quite often you get to make all the decisions. You get to have all the responsibility. Today, you don't want it. Don't worry, you're not losing your touch. Wait until tomorrow. You'll have more facts and be able to make a better choice then.
- Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) - Today is a 7 - If you get all your friends working on a project together, it won't be much of a burden on anyone. Ask a friend to do the part of the job that you find most difficult. All of a sudden, everything will start to look like fun again. The more, the merrier!
- Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) - Today is a 6 - You're doing more than three or four ordinary human beings put together. Slow down just a minute, OK? Let a friend mastermind the proceedings. Assure a jittery older person that everything will be fine. It will be, eventually. Take a break, before you wear out.
- Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) - Today is a 7 - You're having a conflict with an older person, right? You can confide your innermost thoughts to a dear friend who lives far away. Don't do it on company time, though. That will just make your problem worse. Not even e-mail. OK then, don't let anybody catch you at it.
- Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) - Today is a 6 - If bills are coming due, sell a toy you hardly ever play with anymore. You hate to part with it, but don't worry. Consider it a gift to somebody who can use it, and then to your creditors. This looks like a better day to sell than to buy, so don't go shopping later.
- Today's Birthday (Oct. 29) - Finish an overdue project this year, even if it's hard. Develop your plan in November. Start with a purchase in December. An older person points you in the right direction in January. Change things for the better at home in February. Focus on completion in April and work overtime to get it. The summer's relatively uneventful. Your destiny should be clear by September. Work you've done helps you choose in October.

8 STOPS 7

8 STOPS 7, a Santa Barbara band, was formed in late 1996 by singer-songwriter Evan Sula-Goff and guitarist-songwriter Seth Watson. The two joined forces with drummer Adam Powell and bass player Alex Viveros. Presently right out of high school, these four young men appeal not only to kids but also to all other age groups. Their music displays a passionate and melodic heavy sound, progressive grooves and cool riffs with lyrics that have meaning.

There is no constant search for the cutting edge with 8 STOPS 7, "It comes from the heart," says Evan. The new CD Birth of a Cynic showcases the band's forward-thinking style of songwriting—good solid material with a notable flair for innovation. "Everyone in this group has a hand in the songwriting."

Their new CD will be available in local record stores on November 15.

They will be appearing at Zelo's on State Street on October 31 for a Halloween party and at the Living Room in Goleta on December 19.

Student Alleges Sexual Assault in I.V.

By GRETCHEN MACCHIARELLA
Reporter

An evening of festivities ended with the alleged rape of an Isla Vista resident in her own apartment.

UCSB alumnus Arturo Olives was arrested and charged with the rape of an intoxicated 19-year-old UCSB student in I.V. on Sunday, Oct. 19. Currently, Olives has been released on $40,000 bail, according to the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Dept.

The victim had attended a going-away party for the suspect. She then returned to her apartment on the 6700 block of Trigo Road with Olives, her roommate and a few other friends. The victim was very intoxicated, according to Sheriff's Dept. reports.

"The victim then threw up repeatedly and passed out on her bed," reports state. "[About 1:30-2 a.m.] the roommate went to check on the victim and found the door to her room locked."

The witness then went outside the house to look in the bedroom window, where she saw the alleged rape occur.

"[She saw] Olives on top of the victim 'thrusting,'" reports state. "The witness saw the suspect leave [in the morning], but said nothing. [She then] woke up the victim and questioned her about the incident."

The victim alleged that she had no knowledge of the event, reports state.

The law is clear regarding ability to consent while under the influence, according to Sheriff's Dept. Lt. Jim Peterson.

"You can't have sex with someone who is unable to give consent because of intoxication," he said.

UCSB Women's Center Rape Prevention Education Coordinator Carol Mosely stressed the problem of acquaintance rape on college campuses.

"Those are exactly the kind of rapes we have here. Most rapes involve alcohol on both parts," she said. "But alcohol does not cause rape."

The alleged rape occurred in a presumably safe environment, which makes it even more disturbing, according to Lt. Peterson.

"Passed out in her bed, you would think she would be safe," he said.

Approximately 5 percent of sexual assaults are reported, according to Mosely.

"This continues to be a vastly under-reported crime," she said. "The myth continues that she somehow asked for it. This is not the fault of the survivor. No one asks to be raped."

I.V. resident and sophomore psychology major Tina Delano believes irresponsible drinking can lead to such situations.

"Personally I never drink beyond my limits. I don't think anyone should drink to the point where they can't take care of themselves," she said. "I think both the victim and the suspect were responsible, but it should never happen."

Editorial Policy

The Daily Nexus opinion section is an ongoing discussion of the events and issues relevant to the UCSB community, mediated by the Opinion editor and the assistant Opinion editor. The Staff Editorial is determined as follows: The Editorial Board meets daily to discuss current issues. A board majority chooses a topic for discussion, and the result is written up as the Staff Editorial by the Opinion editor. Columns can be submitted by anyone and should not exceed three pages, typed and double-spaced. The Reader's Voice is a public forum for those wishing to respond to or comment on anything current. Only one comment/response cycle will be published. All material must include a name and phone number; submissions are subject to editing for length and clarity. Drop off submissions at the Nexus office below Storke Tower; alternately, fax them to (805) 893-3905; or you may e-mail <nexus@mcl.ucsb.edu>.

Examining the Issues

➤ The Real Issues Behind the GWSD Election

DAVID BEARMAN

Why is so much attention uncharacteristically being focused on the Goleta West Sanitary District? There are a number of reasons.

Urban Sprawl: The Goleta West Sanitary District holds one of the keys to whether urban sprawl will characterize the south coast. For many years, locally elected officials of different political stripes have agreed that — differing as we do on "infill" issues of residential and commercial development — the existing urban limit line west of Goleta should remain sacrosanct.

New pressures are coming to challenge this community consensus, which was formalized in the Goleta General Plan. First came the Hyatt Hotel, which the GWSD has already agreed to annex.

Next may come annexation of the fictitious community of "Naples," a 19th-century get-rich-quick scheme that left lot lines on some county maps. The existence of these lines may result in an attempt to construct hundreds of luxury homes adjacent to the Hyatt project and ARCO golf course, thereby effectively piercing the urban limit line and setting a bad precedent for further infringements on the urban limit barrier from Carpinteria to Gaviota.

The GWSD is under no legal liability or obligation whatsoever to annex Naples to the sanitary district. Such action would facilitate the building of potentially hundreds of homes beyond the existing urban limit line. The property owner bought the property knowing full well that the area is not within the boundaries of the GWSD and was zoned as 100-acre-minimum parcels.

The issue here is not provision of sanitary service to an existing property owner within the present boundaries of the GWSD, but provision of sanitary service to a new area outside existing district boundaries. The Naples developers have already initiated preliminary discussions with the GWSD. Environmentalists such as Citizens for Goleta Valley, former Supervisor Bill Wallace and Supervisor Gail Marshall have taken note of environmental issues and have endorsed challengers Diane Conn and Mike Glick.

Plant Capacity: Including Naples in the GWSD is related to existing treatment plant capacity. Currently the plant, which serves the entire Goleta Valley (including the Santa Barbara Municipal Airport, UCSB and county areas), is at 75 percent of capacity. The general manager of the GWSD estimates that with full build-out of Goleta under the Goleta General Plan the plant will be at 98 percent capacity. This estimated 2 percent buffer does not provide enough flexibility to make it feasible to allow for annexation of Naples or other areas to the sanitary district in a cost-effective or fiscally prudent manner.

Further, recently the sanitary districts in Goleta agreed that even using the full capacity of the current plant is not possible without additional plant modifications to decrease the total dissolved solids in the effluent. This is because at higher sewage flows the amount of solids going into the ocean will exceed the state waiver limit. Currently the Goleta plant has a waiver from environmental-quality rules requiring full secondary treatment. A waiver must be obtained every five years from the state Water Quality Control Board to operate the plant. This is yet another argument against annexations to the GWSD.

Finances: The district's finances are also an issue in this election. As a result of improperly using property tax funds for several years to subsidize commercial rates, the district was required to impose a sudden and dramatic increase in the fees charged to many commercial customers.

Other critics noted the large sum of over half a million dollars spent on the lengthy study of the dissolution/annexation issue (between $400,000 and $700,000 according to recent media articles). Still others were upset that when the firm of Kennedy-Jenks managed the district under contract, several engineering projects which exceeded $10,000 did not go out to bid as required by law. Instead they were awarded to Kennedy-Jenks without competitive bids.

Sanitary District Consolidation vs. Special District Fiefdom: Isla Vista landlords, led by Chuck Eckert, through their front organization, Goletans for Better Government — have spent over $20,000 to create a red herring in the sanitary district race — Goleta cityhood. They have thrown their support to the incumbents.

The real government organization issue is why the current GWSD board ignored the wishes of 70 percent of Goleta West voters in a 1993 advisory election and after two years and studies costing $700,000 voted 3-2 to pull the plug on consolidating the GWSD with the Goleta Sanitary District. To make matters worse (at least insofar as being responsive to the wishes of their GWSD constituents), a majority of the current board then voted to support the neighboring Goleta Sanitary District in obtaining special state legislation (SB712), a portion of which applies only to Goleta. SB712 has been characterized by local media as a "back-room deal" to thwart the will of the majority in the GWSD to consolidate.

The Goleta cityhood proposal can be forwarded by 10,000 registered voters signing petitions, and the cityhood committee has collected many thousands of these signatures. Also, any special district can forward the request to Local Agency Formation Commission for comprehensive fiscal analysis. It is my understanding that the Isla Vista Recreation and Park District has on its agenda, or soon will, an item to discuss having its manager prepare a report on this issue.

Cityhood is an important but separate issue. It will come to the voters only after a thorough review and approval by LAFCO. It is paradoxical and ironic that the very same Isla Vista voters, these cityhood opponents (Goletans for Better Government) who so fear being included in the city of Goleta, elected the incumbents who are supported by GBG. The cityhood proposal is supported by a wide coalition — several Goleta Chamber of Commerce board members, including Chamber President Bob Yost, support the current cityhood proposal. Challenger Cris Wood is a member of the Goleta Chamber.

Conclusion: Voters should be aware of what the real issues in the GWSD election are — urban sprawl, fiscal mismanagement, plant capacity, secondary treatment, consolidation of the two Goleta sanitary districts, ignoring the wishes of 70 percent of the voters and whether the $700,000 spent on the consolidation studies was a waste of taxpayers' money. Even in something so mundane as sanitation, the people's wishes should be faithfully represented.

David Bearman, M.D., GWSD director.

The Reader's Voice

LISTEN TO THE VOICE OF THE STUDENTS

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I am sorry, I am just trying to get an education here at UCSB. I am beginning to feel excessively persecuted. Honestly, if this was not my last year, I would transfer. It is just too difficult to get to my classes.

My bike was impounded for being illegally parked. Perhaps, if there were enough bike racks, I would not have illegally parked my bike. I would not mind the $14 fee, except for the fact that I will be paying $20 for a new lock, too. This makes the true cost of retrieving my bike more like $35, which, at about half the cost of my bike and $11 more than the typical parking ticket, seems outrageous.

I can understand the need to break a lock if it posed a serious hazard, blocking a fire exit for example. My bike was simply parked where someone arbitrarily dictated it should not be.

I question the legality of breaking locks, if the bike is not causing a hazard. Compare bike impounding to vehicle impounding. When your car is towed, you must pay the cost of towing plus owed fees. Your car is never damaged, though. They do not break your car locks to tow it. Theoretically, your car is not damaged.

I would argue my lock is an integral element of my bike. In breaking my lock, they have damaged my property. I can afford the $14. I cannot afford the additional $20. I am not going to pay the $14 just to get a bike back which I cannot then lock.

On the other hand, I cannot afford to live without my bike. I live quite far from campus (my housemates drive). I am easily a 45-minute walk from my classes. Without my bike, I will spend at least an hour more per day getting to and from school. I wish I could say I had this time to spare.

As my housemates can attest, I generally leave the house at 7 a.m. and come home about 11 p.m. Now add an hour, for getting to and from class. Quite frankly, that time is coming out of my studying, which is the real reason I am here. (Or so I initially thought. Now I feel I am here to shovel money to a hungry monster while trying not to get stung.)

A friend of mine, Cara Henderson, became victim to a cop yesterday; she was ticketed for biking on a sidewalk. She was riding her bike on the sidewalk. This is a crime? I understand the benefit of keeping order, but a ticket for riding your bike on the sidewalk seems down right excessive.

Perhaps, if the bikepaths were better maintained and a few of the eliminated ones still present, she would not have been riding her bike on the sidewalk. Rather than south of the library on the sidewalk north of the library on the sidewalk, a pothole path south of the library is a more dangerous.

I could give example after example, I have plenty. What it boils down to, I do not want to attend UCSB. It is just too inconvenient and too expensive to get to classes. The school does not want us to bike and drive us to drive.

It seems the only way the school wants us to get to class is on the expensive tram. Why not listen to the students for once and sell the stupid tram? The money would be better used to buy and repaving all the bikepaths. New decent bike racks are bought. Providing a shuttle service between dorms and buildings, provide bike racks between the two points. Bikes for cheap.

We, the students, far outnumber the faculty and administration. We are very unhappy with the way the situation is being handled. We are quite clear about this. We have heard.

Do you really want to go to school where your voice does not matter?

Do you really want to attend school where students feel persecuted?

FINALLY, A PERSIAN AMERICAN CLUB

Editor, Daily Nexus:

It has come to my attention that there are not enough people on the UCSB campus who know of a club which focuses on (Iranian)-American culture. I would like to invite anyone who is interested in this beautiful culture to come to the first club meeting on the 1997-98 school year. What club? The Persian-American Heritage Club. Our meeting will be today at the UCen Mission Room. Please come to attend, for this will be a great time to attend, for this will be Refreshments and music will be provided. Thank you.

COPS HAVE NO BUSINESS ON CAMPUS

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Today while I was walking on campus, I saw something rather disturbing. Three cops on campus looking at me. I was going to give out tickets to people who were not riding their bikes on the sidewalk. I was informed by some friends that this was the exact action I was taking.

One might ask what the point of this is, but the better question is why the campus enforcing a meaningful rule doesn't help anyone except the cops. Financial pockets, which get fat off of those unjustified tickets. The cops, are the only ones that cause a select few individuals to be on campus. It was time to give out tickets for riding on the sidewalk.

Are we back in elementary school? Yeah, let me grab my helmet and ride. While I'm at it. If my mind is not on the road, don't we have CSOs to ride our bikes? Or is this just another of those similar intimidation factors that we seem to see about the time the cops come around?

The cops have absolutely no business on our campus. I could think of a hundred things the cops could be doing instead of writing tickets, which ultimately leads to hatred of enforcement. Writing tickets is the way to intimidate anyone who didn't know that riding a bike on the sidewalk was illegal.

Letters to the editor should be no longer than 500 words and MUST include the author's name and phone number.

walk. Rather than ride on the bikepath, I ride on the sidewalk. The library is too thin...

Yep, you better toss on your riot gear and break out the tear gas for such a terrible offense. This time I think the cops have gone too far, and I think that something must be done about this unnecessary police presence on our campus. If we want the cops, we'll call them.

NATHANIEL ROUSH

FISCAL IRRESPONSIBILITY AND THE GWSD

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Chuck Eckert and his group of I.V. landlords in "Goletans for Better Government" continue with their pattern of smoke screens and misrepresentations with their last-minute propaganda.

In the latest flier, they quote the News-Press to substantiate the position of my opponent in the Goleta West Sanitary District race. The quote goes "... the Sanitary District could end up paying $500,000 or more to evaluate the ... proposed city."

I am running for director of the GWSD to promote fiscal responsibility and efficiency in government.

My position on cityhood is as follows: Cityhood in Goleta is going to happen sooner or later and will have a profound impact on the GWSD as well as other issues. I want the sanitary district to take a pro-active role in this process.

Cityhood, however, is not my reason for running for the GWSD. With or without cityhood, Goleta and Isla Vista do not need two sanitary districts! The current board has been stonewalling on the consolidation issue for years. Seventy percent of district voters told them to merge the two districts and $700,000 later, they have not done it.

Wasting $700,000 of the taxpayers' money on a political effort to protect their empire is fiscal irresponsibility on the part of my opponents.

MICHAEL GLICK

FALSE ADVERTISING BY A.S. IS A DISGRACE

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Greetings. To get immediately to the point, this note expresses my discontent with actions by our very own Associated Students: false advertising of student ticket prices.

The problem is that they have, do, and will advertise their events (music, shows, etc.) with a reduced price for students but do not honor it. This is false advertising.

For example, last Thursday night, the A.S. Program Board put on a concert, and each and every sign on campus advertised that the cost for students was $9 whereas the general-public cost was $10.

The general-admission price at the door at the time of the show was $10 for students and public alike. That means that if you were a non-student and bought a ticket pre-sale (generally thought of as for a discount), then you would have paid $11, whereas at the door you only paid $10.

The bottom line: A.S. is you, me and every other student on this campus. I'd like to know why they are taking advantage of us by false advertising and charging a surcharge. We are the self-supporting students who care about the principle of this policy.

Has this been going on because no one has barked? Bark. This policy should be amended.

Carpe Diem Halloween

Let's Recapture the Spirit of Halloween in I.V.

NICK ROBERTSON

Isla Vista, the time has come to reclaim Halloween!

It was ours once. Less than two decades ago, Halloween was a sacred time for I.V. residents, when we wandered the streets in elaborate costumes as a fun display of community pride.

But then it got out of hand.

People traveled from across the state, nay, from across the West, to take part in the celebrations so treasured by locals. But the outsiders didn't give a damn about the community, they only cared about the fun.

And soon enough, the fun disappeared for the locals.

The combination of too many fights and too much senseless debauchery turned an annual festival into an annual melee. The thousands of visitors poured out of the parties and into the streets, with no concern for the repercussions of their drunken actions.

Things had gone too far. And so the sheriff came to town.

In 1993, Sheriff Jim Thomas instituted the "No Tolerance" policy toward I.V. Halloween, packing our seaside town with dozens of cops, paddy wagons and horses. Scores of students (mostly visitors from other colleges) were arrested, and anyone who avoided incarceration still got Thomas's message loud and clear — the party was over for Isla Vista Halloween.

For the past four years, floods of fuzz have filled our freehold every Halloween weekend, and for all practical purposes, the "No Tolerance" policy worked. Using last year's Halloween as a gauge, the violence has ended, the visitors are nonexistent, and even the locals would prefer to go downtown to celebrate or just stay inside and forget about it altogether.

Enter the Isla Vista Recreation and Park District.

Last year, realizing that a wonderful local tradition was nearing extinction, the wise IVRPD sages decided to take bold action to revitalize the celebration that was once Halloween. Opening up Isla Vista's central parks to the entire community, the district sponsored and organized a magnificent festival on Oct. 31, featuring carnival games, a costume-judging contest, a concert, and dozens of other attractions to bring the fun back to I.V. Halloween.

And it worked so well, they're doing it again this year.

In conjunction with Associated Students, the IVRPD's Halloween Festival will be held this Friday, and it's gonna rock — so long as you are willing to do your part.

I'm sure you have already heard, overheard, or read about this celebration, but you may not know exactly what is at stake. Perhaps the spirit of Halloween has become unclear in recent years, but the idea behind it is simple — to have fun with our fellow Isla Vistans, and to realize the potential we can reach as a community.

Now it's your turn to work toward this effort, and all you have to do to make this event a true success is get creative and show up. How many excuses do we get anymore to don a silly costume and roam the streets? Damn few, and there will only be less and less of them as we grow older. Carpe diem Halloween!

By wearing a costume and coming out to celebrate, the festival will be a perfect chance to relive your childhood. Among the carnival games will be a dunk tank and a giant trampoline bouncer. The concert will go from 5 'til midnight, featuring local bands and rockin' grooves. A costume judging contest will be held, with various prizes for all sorts of disguises. And to kick it all off, there will be a Halloween Costume Parade.

In the same tradition of the Isla Vista Parade last spring, we will all be gathering at Dog Shit Park on the corner of Del Playa and Camino Corto at 6 p.m., where we'll congregate peacefully and enjoy each other's Halloween spirit. When we have a good turnout, we'll proceed to march down DP, all the way to Perfect Park at the top of the Embarcadero Loop, to where the festivities will be in full swing.

Everyone, let me repeat, everyone in the UCSB/I.V. community is welcome to come be a part of this incredible procession. The parade has the full support and cooperation of the I.V. Foot Patrol, and provides everyone with a wonderful opportunity to literally march side by side in our craziest get-up, singing and celebrating the spirit of Isla Vista Halloween. At the very least, hang out along Del Playa and cheer on the passing participants. Just be a part of the Halloween rebirth somehow.

At any rate, people will be gathered in Dog Shit Park at 6 p.m. dressed up and ready for action, and your being there will make this event truly unforgettable. C'mon, people — now is the time for Halloween to become a local celebration once again, and only together can we make it happen. Dress up in a costume, and don't let Halloween die while holding the medicine.

getting his sea legs in the House. But even if he had never passed any legislation, his spirit left a mark with us. He showed us how to live." In 1996, Capps stayed away from the negative ads used by Seastrand. He said a near-fatal car crash in May 1996 that kept him from campaigning for most of the summer had changed his perspective on life.

Despite never holding office, he garnered 102,915 votes to Seastrand's 90,374 in the 22nd Congressional District race.

Seastrand lost points with many voters with her ads. The most controversial depicted Capps, who opposes the death penalty, next to Richard Allen Davis, the convicted killer of 12-year-old Polly Klaas.

Only two people were disappointed by Allen's recent death sentence, the ad said: "Richard Allen Davis, the murderer. And Walter Capps."

Even political foes, however, respected Capps, said Bob Handy, a friend and regional director for the California Democratic Party for San Luis Obispo, Ventura and Santa Barbara counties.

"Walter was a man that was loved by anybody that might have met him," Handy said. "Even his political detractors had wonderful things to say about him."

San Luis Obispo Mayor Allen Settle said Capps was the most responsive of Washington politicians to the city's needs.

"He was a person who really used every effort to see how he could use his office to help the community that he represented. ... He was a person who took this on as a real sincere effort to get local concerns reflected in Congress," Settle said.

State Democratic Party Chair Art Torres added, "Walter was an outstanding representative for his district, a priceless asset to his community and an inspiration to the many students whose lives he touched at UC Santa Barbara."

The oldest of four brothers, Capps was raised in Omaha, graduated from Portland State University in Oregon and received a master's and doctorate degree from Yale. He also earned a master of sacred theology degree from Yale Divinity School.

Capps is survived by his wife, Lois; three adult children; and one grandchild. Congressional staffers said his body would be flown back to California late Tuesday or Wednesday.

students. Walter was highly respected and well-loved by our colleagues, friends and alumni of UCSB and throughout the rest of the academic world," he said. "He was also a beloved congressman who traveled and worked tirelessly for the well-being of our community and district. He was a congressman filled with energy, dedication and vision. On behalf of our entire UCSB community, I express our deepest and most heartfelt condolences to Lois and their family."

students was reflected in his excellent teaching style, said Religious Studies Dept. acting Chair Wade Clark Roof. "Walter Capps will long be remembered as one of the most inspirational teachers of UCSB. He is a compassionate, caring person, someone who was always deeply interested in the students," he said. "He will be remembered as a master teacher and as a wonderful person by the tens of thousands of students that took his class."
Sociology Professor Richard Flacks, a longtime colleague of Capps, lamented the loss of an important leader on the national and local levels. "This is tremendously shocking and upsetting," he said. "It's a great blow because he was someone who people received as a positive force in Congress. He spoke for the values of many of the people in this area."

UCSB News and Media Relations Director Joan Magruder also praised Capps' devotion to teaching. "I've known him for 18 years. For 30 years, he taught one of the most popular courses offered here, the Vietnam War class. I've never met a better person, and that came across in his class," she said. "My heart goes out to his wife and kids." Magruder fondly recollected her last encounter with Capps. "When I saw him a few months ago, he couldn't seem happier," she said. The death of Walter Capps is a serious detriment to the community, said senior political science major Anthony Bloch, who worked with Capps as a liaison between Washington and his constituents in Santa Barbara. "He followed through, unlike a lot of politicians. He was an individual, not just a congressman," he said. "The dedication he had for his people was unbelievable."

Field Hockey Goose-Egged by Stanford, Cal at Tourney

BY BEN ALKALY
Staff Writer

The UCSB field hockey team had a couple of doughnuts this past weekend, but we're not talking glazed or jelly-filled.

These rather sour doughnuts came courtesy of the University of California Bears and Stanford Cardinal, who handed the Gauchos (4-4) shutout losses last weekend at the Cal Berkeley Invitational tournament.

According to first-year Head Coach Brian Schledorn, Saturday's 7-0 defeat by Division I Stanford was a result of poor early play and having to compete on an unfamiliar surface.

"We just didn't start well," Schledorn said. "That's where they got a lot of their goals. It was our first game on AstroTurf; a real eye-opener."

Freshman goalkeeper Stacey Sampson, who learned the art of net-minding just last month, also felt the early lapse took the wind out of Santa Barbara's collective sail.

"Against Stanford it kind of fell apart," she said. "It was discouraging. Four goals came in the first half."

While the squad expressed disappointment regarding the Cardinal match, UCSB was nothing but exuberant about its performance Sunday against Cal, also a D-I program. Senior co-captain Kim Carson believes the game was much closer than the 4-0 final score would indicate.

"The weird thing was we didn't play bad at all," she said. "They were just able to capitalize on the few little mistakes we made. We all played at our usual level, which was good."

Schledorn was pleased with his team's ability to hang on the turf with a more experienced opponent.

"Cal was actually a better team [than Stanford], and we played pretty well against them," Schledorn said. "Most of our game was defensive. We had a few chances to score, but couldn't put them away."

The Gauchos will get a respite from taking on fully-funded programs this Sunday at noon when they battle Cal Poly SLO at the Pit. The schools have met twice this season already, with Santa Barbara taking both contests.

"We should beat them," Schledorn said. "We're going to pick up our basic skills a little more — work on fundamentals."

WHERE'S THE BALL?: The UCSB field hockey team couldn't muster much offense last weekend, being shutout in two matches.

The UCSB water ski team placed third out of 12 schools at the UCSD Octoberfest tournament last weekend in beautiful Barstow. Congrats!

Athlete of the Week

LANCE WAHLERT

Lance "The Wall" Wahlert Leads Gauchos

Imagine having to tread water for a half-hour while balls are hurled at you at speeds up to 50 miles per hour. Making for an even more complicated scenario, imagine an entire team relying on you to prevent any of those balls from getting by you.

Welcome to the world of UCSB men's water polo goalkeeper Lance Wahlert. The Gaucho junior finds himself in such a situation week in and week out. As if voluntarily being there isn't commendable enough, it should also be mentioned that Wahlert is among the elite collegiate goalkeepers in the nation.

As team captain, Wahlert serves as the backbone for a much-improved Santa Barbara squad. With Wahlert missing most of last season due to mononucleosis, UCSB struggled through a 2-22 season. This year, with Wahlert tending the net full time, the Gauchos' record stands at 9-6 with six regular season matches remaining.

UCSB Head Coach Joe O'Brien expressed little doubt regarding Wahlert's role in this year's improvement.

"Last spring we made an assessment of what needed to be done to be more competitive this season," O'Brien said. "Lance listened to what was said and pretty much took charge to make sure the team accomplished the goals that we set for ourselves. He's the type of player that makes teams better."

The Loyola Marymount University Lions would most likely testify to O'Brien's commendations. Last weekend Wahlert shut out the Lions for the entire first half before being pulled early in the third quarter. His performance led to a 9-0 half-time lead, and the Gauchos ultimately cruised to a 17-2 victory.

Wahlert modestly denied his performance as being crucial to the Gauchos' improvement this season.

"I don't feel that it's really my doing at all," he said. "The defense usually dictates my performance. If they play well, then so do I."

Wahlert has an impressive 95 saves this season and has only allowed 7.5 goals per game. As outstanding as these numbers are, O'Brien believes that Wahlert may be even more effective at practice than he has been during games.

"Lance is constantly working with the younger goalkeepers and defensive players in order to help them improve and make us better as a team," O'Brien said. "He is just one of those players that a coach loves to have on his team. We consider ourselves very fortunate to have him playing for us."

UCSB Linksmen Notch Early Season Tournament Win

The UCSB men's golf team is closing out the fall season with its first tournament win in over four years under its clubs.

On Oct. 21-22 the Gauchos managed to showcase their best performance in recent years by capturing the Cal State Northridge Intercollegiate Tournament. With 14 teams participating in the event, chalking up a win provided a much-needed boost for the team.

"It was a good win, the first one in a long time. Hopefully we can carry this momentum through the rest of the season," Head Coach Steve Lass said.

Impressive individual performances from juniors Brian Helton and Joe Pearl proved vital to the team's overall victory.

"It is good to see our team get off to a good start this year," Pearl said. "This win was a good motivator for our younger guys that have a lot of talent, especially when we all come together."

"This was probably the most exciting time of my nine-year golfing career because being an individual sport, we could share that winning feeling with everybody," Helton said.

Friday and Saturday, the team competed in its second tournament in as many weeks at the Fresno State/Lexus Classic held at the San Joaquin Country Club. Santa Barbara had a solid but unspectacular showing in Fresno, placing 12th out of 23 schools. Helton was the top Gaucho finisher, placing 18th with a seven-over-par.

These strong early season results — coupled with a top-15 ranking in the Western Region — may be enough to qualify UCSB for the NCAA tournament next spring.

The squad will play in its final tournament of the fall season Nov. 6-7 at Long Beach State, and expects to be atop the leader board again.

"Our win got our team fired up. Now that they know they are a very good team, hopefully this can carry into future tournaments," Lass said.
